No. 928.

The Explanation

By RUDYARD KIPLING.

Other selections from this author, his portrait, autograph and biographical sketch, have already been printed in this series.

Love and Death once ceased their strife At the Tavern of Man's Life. Called for wise, and threw—alas!— Each his quiver on the grass. When the bout was o'er they found Mingled arrows strewed the ground.
Hastly they gathered then
Each the loves and fives of men.
Ah! the fateful dawn deceived,
Mingled arrows each one sheaved;
Denth's dread armoury was stored With the shafts he most abhorred; love's light quiver groaned beneath Venom-headed darts of Death.

hus it was they wrought our woe At the Tavern long ago. Tell me, do our masters know, Loosing blindly as they fly, Old men love while young men die?

Roosevelt's Hard Sense

"In speaking to you, men of the greatest city of the West, men of the State which gave to the country Lincoln and Grant, men who pre-eminently and distinctly embody all that is most American in the American character, I wish to preach not the doctrine of ignoble case, but the doctrine of the Strenuous Life—the life of toil and effort, of labor and strife; to preach that highest form of success which comes not to the man who desires mere easy peace, but to the man who does not shrink from dauger, from hardships, or from bitter toil, and who, out of these wins the splendid ultimate triumph."-Speech at Chicago.

Those who know how the weak boy, Roosevelt, stripped himself of the things which made him weak, and, by application, made himself the magnificent man of to-day, can approclate what may be accomplished by resolute determination to be and to do. This gives the opportunity to say here that any boy or man who finds himself held back, with hands tied (metaphorically) by some unnatural habit, say, for instance, Coffee drinking, and finds the physical body working badly, liver and nerves disordered and unfit for that life of keen effort which Roosevelt speaks of, and which leads up to success, can use his common sense, cut out the enemy and strip off the load that holds him back. Try leaving off Coffee, Use Postum Food Coffee and get the double value, i. e., a release from the drug habit and the strong natural stimulus of the rebuilding food elements presented in Postum.
